Big savings for NAIT
LRT lineTransit. Project coming in $90 million under budget; city hopes to move funds to southeast lineRYAN
TUMILTY
ryan.tumilty@metronews.ca

Big savings on the construction of the NAIT line could be applied to the city's next LRT project, reducing a $200 million loan the city is taking on for the project.

The $755 million line to NAIT may not have come in on time, with its opening delayed until December, but it's coming in $90 million under budget.

Wayne Mandryk, the city's LRT design and construction manager, said that the contract appears to have hit the market at just the right time.

"The contractors were a little bit hungrier and the land prices a little lower," he said.

The $90 million in savings includes $60 million from the province's Green Trip program. City administration is recommending council ask the province to take that money and apply it to the $200 million loan the province agreed to provide as part of its overall funding commitment to the new line to Mill Woods.

Coun. Amarjeet Sohi said he's very pleased the NAIT line is coming in under budget and he hopes it's a sign of things to come when the city goes to market for the south east LRT line.

He said he's also hopeful the province will allow the city to transfer the $60 million to the next project.

"I have no reason not to be optimistic. This money was allocated to LRT projects in the city and that LRT project is under budget, so we should have the flexibility to apply it to other LRT projects," Sohi said.

Christine Way, a spokesperson for transportation minister Wayne Drysdale, said any re-allocation of Green Trip funds would have to have the support of the Capital Region Board, but other than that the province is likely to support the plan.

"There's no reason why it wouldn't be looked upon favourably," she said.

Extra 'tax room' should go to roads: Councillors

City councillors will be asked next week to put $27.1 million into the city's roads by using unused education tax room from the province.

The city's yearly budget always includes a portion of taxes for the provincial education system, which the city estimates because budgets haven't been set. In this case the city overestimated the province's needs by $27.1 million. The city can use that money and the overall tax increase, which council set at 4.92 per cent, won't rise.

The city has been studying a long-term commitment to arterial road rehabilitation, which early estimates have pegged at a $50-million per year program.

Coun. Amarjeet Sohi said it makes sense for the city to use the tax room for road projects.

"If the city takes and puts this money into our critical infrastructure, taxes won't go up," he said. "As you and every Edmontonian knows, our roads are in deplorable condition."

Coun. Mike Nickel said he tried to lower the tax increase at budget time, but he generally favours putting more money into core services.

"I would prefer tax relief, but I will just be frank about this, with the state of the roads and some of the infrastructure, we need every dime we can have," he said. "The state of inventory in some cases is very, very bad."

North-end cemetery vandalized

St. Michael's cemetery manager
Marc Turgeon RYAN TUMILTY/METRO

Karen Johnson rushed to St. Michael's Cemetery Thursday morning when she heard the distressing news the facility had been vandalized.

Her father, mother and sister's graves were untouched, but 66 other monuments were broken.

"It's a relief that ours weren't disturbed at all, but seeing this is here is very sad," she said.

"My stomach was actually turning in knots."

Const. Liam Watson, who is investigating the incident, said police believe it took place late Tuesday or early Wednesday morning and are hoping the public can come forward with information.

He said while it will be difficult, the police definitely want to solve this case, because of the impact it has on people.

"It would affect me greatly if it was one of my family, and for that reason I want people to rest assured that I will do everything that I can," he said.

Marc Turgeon, the cemetery's manager, estimated the damage as being between $50,000 and $75,000.

He said he is struck by the senselessness of the whole spree.

"I have been thinking, Why would somebody do this? What do they get out of doing something like this?"

Anyone with information is asked to call police.

Radio station apologizes for sexual assault poll

Victim blaming.
More education needed, experts say

LEAH GERMAIN
leah.germain@metronews.ca

Sexual assault advocates are calling an online poll an Edmonton radio station posted Thursday morning an example of how much education is needed around victim blaming.

Posted on 630 CHED's website, the poll was connected to a story about a panel on rape culture that took place Wednesday evening. It asked respondents if they thought a woman's dress or how much she had to drink could be partly to blame for sexual assault.

While the station was quick to reword the poll and apologize on air, one of Wednesday night's panelists said the new wording does little to address the problem.

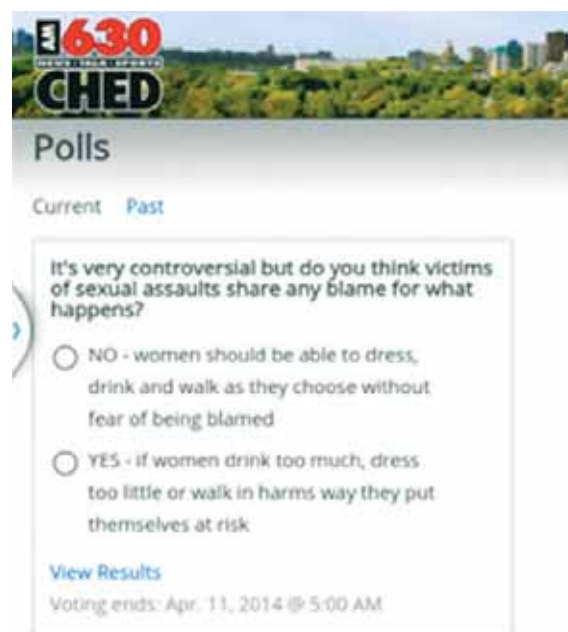

"It is still inviting people to speculate on whether survivors of trauma and abuse are to blame," said Nikki Bernier, a public educator for the Sexual Assault Centre of Edmonton.

Brand director for 630 CHED Syd Smith took responsibility for the poll.

"I am sorry as a person responsible for the programming of the radio station," said Smith on the Tencer and Grose show Thursday morning.

"I understand people being upset, and I agree, frankly, with people being upset."

Policing. Citizens make good use of online crime reporting tool

Edmontonians are logging on to file crime reports with almost 3,000 people reporting crimes online in the first year of a new program.

Police launched their online crime reporting tool in April 2013, and since that time 2,831 people have filed reports.

Temporary acting Sgt. Tony Paxton said they're getting a lot of positive feedback and they believe it's leading to them getting more information.

"We are capturing crime now that we may not have captured in the past and with that crime comes intelligence," he said.

Paxton said the reporting system is also much more efficient, freeing up police resources for other investigations.

The service allows citizens to report crimes such as lost property, theft, damage/mischief to property, theft from vehicle and damage/mischief to vehicle.

The service aims to respond to all of those reports within 24 hours. RYAN TUMILTY/METRO

Tories. New leader needs some humility: Stelmach

Former premier Ed Stelmach says the province's next Conservative leader needs to be modest, humble and acknowledge that mistakes have been made.

Stelmach, who was premier from 2006 to 2011, says whoever is chosen to replace Alison Redford will also need to connect communities across Alberta.

Redford resigned March 19 amid a spreading scandal over lavish travel expenses, flights, and perks for herself and her inner circle.

Opinion polls show the Tories dipped to historically low popularity levels under Redford, but Stelmach says the party has been low in the polls before and he's confident it will recover.

No one has officially announced they will run for the party's leadership, which ends with a vote by members in September.

Stelmach says whoever throws their hat in the ring will have two years of hard work to win the leadership, a byelection if they're not already elected, and then campaigning for the next provincial election in 2016.

Issue not a deferred maintenance cost: ECS

Edmonton's Catholic school board says it's in consultation with the province to come up with funding solutions after black mould was discovered in a west-end elementary.

$5.5M

The cost of expected repairs to an Edmonton school after mould was discovered in the walls.

School to neighbouring facilities, ECS will be undertaking a major renovation to the school worth $5.5 million to address mould concerns first identified in September 2013.

With funds for the renovation most likely to come from the board's planned operation and maintenance budget, ECS spokesperson Lori Nagy said the issue isn't being considered a deferred maintenance project.

"This really doesn't have anything to do with funding from Alberta Education or Alberta Infrastructure," said Nagy. "It's really a design flaw."

Nagy said the school is relatively young and had one of the lowest deferred maintenance rates in the district, and this situation is the result of a construction oversight.

"This school has had a lot of maintenance over the years because we have had concerns and problems with moisture," Nagy added. "We really believe the majority of damage that has been done is due to the last couple of summers and the amount of precipitation."

Some parents have expressed concern that the issue is only now being addressed.

"Had it been addressed sooner, then probably it wouldn't have been this large of a project and undertaking and impacted the community as much as it's going to," said Cindy Shepel, chairperson for the school's parent council.

Pet project. Flynn the therapy dog to help stressed-out students

leah.germain@metronews.ca

With a big wet nose and soft, curly locks down the length of his body, Flynn might not look like the typical graduate at the Northern Alberta Institute of Technology, but the Australian Labradoodle had a lot to celebrate Thursday.

As the first-ever assisted therapy dog at NAIT, Flynn will be working five days a week helping students de-stress while on campus.

Flynn's owner Linda Shaw, a registered nurse on campus, said she saw first-hand the need for pet therapy.

"I am hoping he will be one more way to help students release stress and anxiety," said Shaw.

After spending the last year completing obedience training and working with an animal behaviourist, Flynn is ready to go solo and get down to business: the business of eating treats and accepting cuddles from students like Tannis Lange.

As a diagnostic medical sonography student, Lange said the stress of her program can be overwhelming, and it's comforting to have a furball walking the halls.

"We have a pretty intense program so we saw him before and after a couple of exams," said Lange. "If you're going through any other kind of troubles in your life and if you need some kind of therapy, it's just an easy go-to."

Design students flaunt their stuff at PeepShow

University of Alberta students are giving interested spectators a peep into their latest design efforts.

As part of their final project, students from U of A's design program are hosting the annual graduate exhibition, calling it PeepShow.

"What you get to see in the grad show is just a small look at all the projects and what we've done in the last four years," said Kayla Callfas, a visual communication design student. "We thought that it was relevant that it was just a peep of our world."

U of A student Kayla Callfas will have her project Here I Stand on display at the show until April 12. CONTRIBUTED

Callfas said the show gives the entire graduating class a chance to work together, offering industrial design students the chance to collaborate with the visual communication design students.

Another big part of the show is bringing other demographics into the design fold, including family.

"We talk about how excited we are to have our families come and understand design," she said.

Child pornography. Sting leads to charges against 10 Alberta men

A four-month child pornography sting by Alberta law enforcement response teams has led to charges against 10 men in southern Alberta.

Police in Calgary and Lethbridge, along with RCMP, executed 13 search warrants throughout the area starting last December.

They seized over 300 computers and electronic devices containing thousands of child pornography photos and videos.

Charges

The accused, who range in age from 22 to 65, face charges of possessing, accessing, and making available child pornography.

Police say they will be analyzing the seized electronics and more charges could be laid. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Absent at legislature

Redford takes to Twitter

Alison Redford has resurfaced in Alberta politics, but only on Twitter. Redford has been silent since she resigned as premier three weeks ago, and has not been in the legislature to represent her riding of Calgary-Elbow.

However, she has started tweeting as a member of the legislature.

Her first tweet talked about how she is excited to have Stephen Colbert replace David Letterman as host of TV's Late Show. A second remark included a picture of her handing out grant money to a community group.

Opposition members say Redford needs to get back to the legislature to carry out her duties. THE CANADIAN PRESS

omouallem@gmail.com

When Derrick Forsythe moved to Queen Mary Park in 1994, the central neighbourhood along 107 Avenue was rich with liquor stores, pawn shops and industrial buildings — similar to 124 Street a few blocks west. But 20 years later, the latter is quickly becoming the city's best dining destination. And Queen Mary Park? Though the demographics have changed, little else has.

But in 2004, around the time 124 was turning the corner, Forsythe and representatives from Queen Mary Park and Central McDougall (dubbed the North Edge) were asked by the city to help with an ambitious plan that would see it become a densely populated community anchored by Columbia Avenue — the ultra-urban reincarnation of what's currently 105 Avenue in all its sidewalk-less glory.

Though you might call it

"distressed," the North Edge has great urban form. The Area Revitalization Plan (ARP) laid the groundwork for 10,000 new people to move into the mixed-use buildings that new developers were now compelled to build. Though realistic during the housing boom, the economy soon tanked and now the city wants to reconsider one of its ARP amendments.

"This will effectively kill the North Edge plan," says Forsythe, who ran for Ward 6 councillor in the last election.

However, the City's Sustainable Development planners think it's too prescriptive and possibly hindering revitalization instead of enabling it. Currently the ARP requires any new development or lot rezoning to be mixed-use. It means older buildings can't change their use unless they attach at least 50 residential units above, essentially leaving one option: sell to a capable developer.

At their best, ARPs cohesively direct a community's growth to its best potential. At worst, they back stakeholders into a corner, preventing them from simply leasing space to a prospective restaurant owner — a dilemma that's forced the ARP back to city council this spring for a more business-friendly amendment.

"We do not want to see empty buildings in the North Edge," explains Mark Harrison of sustainable development. "I understand the community leagues' concerns but we also have property owners on the other side saying, 'We can't use our businesses anymore.'"

And who's to say a restaurant couldn't help organically realize the North Edge's goal, the way places like Duchess Bake Shop turned 124 St. around? Perhaps the ARP was too ambitious a plan. But, then again, look at all the cranes in the nearby sky.

The arena, museum and new MacEwan arts campus and various condo dwellings are in the works. An LRT station opens on its eastern edge there are plans for another on the southwest border with Oliver.

In a recent CBC Radio inter-

Quoted

And so the massive development has turned the North Edge into a real estate gamble.

view, Don R. Campbell, the author of several Canadian real estate investment books, remarked that the arena had spurred demand and price increases in adjacent communities, particularly for Queen Mary Park.

And so the massive development has turned the North Edge into a real estate gamble and the city must decide whether it wants to rush to fill the derelict spaces or hang on to its original vision with no guarantee.

"If [Mayor] Iveson is serious about wanting density in the core," remarks Forsythe, "this is going to be his first big test. He can either stand behind the plan or regress."

'Today is a very sad day'

Jim Flaherty. Death of former finance minister stuns Parliament Hill

Jim Flaherty died suddenly Thursday at age 64, less than a month after retiring from his post as Canada's finance minister.

Flaherty, who spent eight years in the role, had been ill for some time, though that was not cited as a reason for his resignation.

The news rocked the House of Commons, as politicians mourned the loss of a finance minister who trudged through a financial crisis and recession and balanced the once rocky Canadian budget.

"Today is a very sad day — for me, for our government and for all of our country. I learned a short time ago that our colleague, my partner and my friend Jim Flaherty has passed away suddenly today," Prime Minister Stephen Harper told MPs in a Parliament

Hill committee room with his wife Laureen in tears by his side.

"This comes as an unexpected and terrible shock to Jim's family, to our caucus and to Laureen and me."

Question period was suspended Thursday after the news broke. The usually raucous chamber was in a lull, with politicians hugging, crying and mourning together.

"It was very, very sombre, sad, but shocking, obviously," said NDP MP Paul Dewar, adding that, unlike other finance ministers, Flaherty brought a certain levity to the usually stressful environment. "He had that twinkle in his eye and he had a great sense of humour that brought something to the House of Commons and the politics, which is all too often not there."

Foreign Affairs Minister John Baird expressed his condolences in a written statement Thursday, calling Flaherty a "good friend and colleague for over two decades."

"Jim was a mentor to me throughout my time at Queen's Park from a very young age," wrote Baird. "I could always rely on Jim to be a devout friend through tough times, and an encouraging figure through good."

Former Parliamentary Budget Officer Kevin Page, now a professor at the University of Ottawa, spent extensive time on the job with Flaherty and although the two butted heads on several issues, Page acknowledged how good a finance minister Flaherty was.

"It's a loss for the country for sure," said Page. "It's just an exhausting job, but he certainly rose to the occasion."

Brazeau arrested on charges of assault, cocaine possession

Gatineau, Que.
Suspended senator Patrick Brazeau pleaded not guilty after police find him in 'physical altercation' with woman

Suspended senator Patrick Brazeau pleaded not guilty on Thursday to several charges, including assault and cocaine possession.

Police arrested the 39-year-old in Gatineau, near Ottawa, at around 4 a.m. Thursday following a domestic assault call. Police say they arrived to find Brazeau and a woman in a "physical altercation." A 50-year-old man was also at the house.

Brazeau was charged with two counts of assault, uttering death threats, cocaine possession and breach of conditions. He briefly appeared in court wearing handcuffs. He did not look at reporters.

He also has one charge of assault and one charge of sexual assault outstanding from 2013.

Brazeau was to be held in custody overnight and was due to reappear in court Friday morning for a bail hearing.

Crown prosecutor Sylvain Petitclerc said he asked to keep Brazeau in custody to assure the safety of others and because he breached bail conditions.

"We cannot just let him go free as a bird like that," he said, adding that depending on the bail hearing, Brazeau could be kept in custody again or be released with certain conditions.

A huge pile of what appeared to be Brazeau's belongings were strewn all over the back door of his girlfriend's house, including photographs, his Certificate of Indian Status card, clothing and CDs.

Gatineau police say the 50-year-old man also on the scene will be charged with assault. LUCY SCHOLEY/METRO IN OTTAWA

Access to information. Report shows Tory staffers interfered with requests

The Information Commissioner of Canada has found evidence of "systemic interference" with access to information requests by three Conservative staff members, and suggests bringing in the police.

But the Public Works Department, where the interference occurred, says it won't be referring the matter to the RCMP because police did not lay charges in a similar case.

Suzanne Legault delivered her second report Thursday following an investigation into cases that date back to 2009 in the office of cabinet minister Christian Paradis, who was Public Works minister at the time.

She had already found against staff member, Sebastien Togneri, in a previous investigation, but found that Togneri and two of his colleagues interfered in five other instances.

Togneri, Jillian Andrews and Marc Toupin had all insisted on changes or modifications to government records that bureaucrats had already cleared for release.

Millard now charged in his father's death

First-degree murder charges. Toronto man already accused in Tim Bosma case

A Toronto man accused of killing a Hamilton father who disappeared after taking a pair of prospective buyers for a test drive has now been charged with murder in the death of his own father and another woman.

Dellen Millard has been charged with first-degree murder in the deaths of Wayne Millard and Laura Babcock, with whom Dellen was romantically linked, Ontario provincial police said Thursday.

Mark Smich is also charged with first-degree murder in Babcock's death.

Dellen Millard

Officers have "attended and spoken with the Babcock family," Toronto police Staff Insp. Greg McLane said in a news conference.

"We'd ask that the victims' families be afforded privacy during these very, very difficult times."

Millard's lawyer, Deepak Paradkar, would not comment on the new charges but said he would "defend the case zealously."

He had previously dismissed any connection between the three cases as speculation.

Millard, 28, and Smich, 26, are charged with first-degree murder in the death of Tim Bosma, who vanished May 6, 2013 after leaving home in his pick-up with two men. He had posted the truck for sale online.

His remains were found about a week later burned beyond recognition at a southwestern Ontario farm belonging to Millard.

Syria

Civilian food crisis at its worst: UN

The United Nations says the food crisis facing displaced Syrian civilians has now reached the worst-case scenario, with no end in sight.

That is forcing the UN World Food Program to cut food distribution by 16 per cent this month to millions of internally displaced people and refugees after a 20 per cent cut in March, said Muhannad Hadi, the agency's emergency co-ordinator for Syria.

This comes as more people than ever before are solely dependent on the agency to feed them. The WFP predicts its desperate client list — from inside Syria and neighbouring countries — to grow from 5.8 million to seven million by year end, said Hadi.

"From day one, we have prepared ourselves for the worst-case scenario, but the fact is we never thought the worst-case scenario would be for so long," Hadi said.

"Fifty-seven million children are still denied access to education."

Spencer West

Sure, we've all been on a road trip, but imagine one that sets out to visit 90 cities in 10 weeks — oh, and did we mention it's all to celebrate Canadian students helping other youth around the world to access education?

Starting Friday, Free the Children ambassador Spencer West, along with friends from the band Neverest, 11-year-old activist Hannah Alper and cast members from Degraasi, are visiting schools across the country as part of the We Create Change Tour.

This unique trip is billed as a "mini We Day" — Free the Children's annual event inspiring youth to get involved and make a difference in their community and the

"Fifty-seven million children are still denied access to education," said West, who lost both his legs at the age of five. "I've had the chance to speak with young people around the world who dream of changing their lives and the lives of their families through education."

As a sponsor, Metro will follow the tour as it makes its way across the country, with West sharing with readers how students across Canada have inspired him with their efforts to help those who haven't had an opportunity to go to school.

Visit metronews.ca to follow our interactive map chronicling West's journey.

Morgentaler Clinic to close this summer

New Brunswick.

Controversial abortion clinic set to close, citing a lack of funds

The contentious issue of abortion in New Brunswick arose Thursday after the Morgentaler Clinic in Fredericton said it will close at the end of July, a decision the facility's manager said was the result of the province's refusal to fund the procedure at clinics.

Simone Leibovitch said the clinic, which has been in operation for 20 years, has been providing abortions even though it has lost about $100,000 over the last decade.

"Dr. Morgentaler's policy was always such that no woman would ever be turned away from having an abortion, and we followed that policy," Leibovitch told a news conference.

"The reality is we can't continue to stay open and provide abortions that are not publicly funded. It's impossible."

Abortion isn't covered by medicare in the province unless two doctors certify in writing that it is medically necessary. In addition, it must be performed by a specialist in an approved hospital.

"As far as I'm concerned, the solution to this problem is up to the government of New Brunswick," Leibovitch said. "They need to repeal Regulation 84-20. It is a barrier to health care. It's always been a barrier to health care."

The regulation was introduced in 1984 and has been a source of controversy. In 2002, Dr. Henry Morgentaler launched a lawsuit in a bid to force the provincial government to pay for the procedure at clinics. The case has been in limbo since Morgentaler died last May.

New Brunswick Health Minister Hugh Flemming refused to comment on the matter, citing the court proceedings.

In the legislature, Liberal Opposition Leader Brian Gallant said he is pro-choice and called on the government to study the issue of access to abortion.

Jula Hughes, a law professor at the University of New Brunswick and a supporter of the Morgentaler Clinic, said she fears women will look for less reputable places to terminate a pregnancy once the facility shuts down. "That would just be horrific beyond contemplation," she said. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Nigeria

Child bride kills groom and friends

A child bride forced into marriage in Nigeria killed a groom and three of his friends with a poisoned meal, police said Thursday.

Fourteen-year-old Wasila Umaru was married last week to 35-year-old Umaru Sani, according to assistant superintendent Musa Magaji Majia.

Over the weekend, the groom invited a dozen friends to celebrate at his village.

Umaru told police she bought rat poison at a village market and used it to prepare a dish of rice.

"The suspect confessed to committing the crime and said she did it because she was forced to marry a man she did not love," Majia said.

The groom and a friend died the same day. Two other victims died later in the hospital. Umaru is co-operating with police and likely will be charged with culpable homicide, Majia said.

According to the UN children's agency, 50 per cent of Nigerian girls in rural areas are married before they turn 18.

Cyber-defence week for cadets

West Point. U.S. military's annual exercise pits cadets against NSA experts

Quoted

"We're playing ball against a major-league team."

Cadet John Zeidler, on the military exercise, which matches NSA computer experts against cadets.

If Douglas MacArthur or Ulysses S. Grant went to the U.S. Military Academy today, they might be testing their defensive skills hunched in front of a computer screen.

A team of caffeine-fuelled cadets is spending long days this week in a computer lab trying to fend off threats cooked up by experts at the National Security Agency. The annual Cyber Defence Exercise running through Thursday will determine which of the five service academies can create computer networks that can best withstand the four-day barrage.

The 14-year-old exercise lacks the lore of Army-Navy football but not the intensity. Not only does the exercise dovetail into the military's broader strategy of staying ahead of the curve in cyber-operations, but the West Point cadets relish the chance to test their computer skills against their peers.

"This is the Army-Navy game for our electrical engineering and computer science departments ... this is our chance to beat the other service academies," said Cadet Jason DeCoursey of Little Rock, Ark.

DeCoursey was one of about 30 senior cadets crammed in a windowless computer lab at the academy on Wednesday. The exercise is essentially a high-tech game of capture the flag: The NSA team attempts to capture "tokens" embedded in the academies' networks. The academies for Army, Navy, Air Force, Coast Guard and Merchant Marine compete, and the one that does the best job fending off the barrage of cyberattacks is declared the winner.

Fighting against jet lag? There's an app for that

Michigan researchers say mathematical formulas suggest it's possible to adjust to new time zones a bit faster than previously thought, and created a free app to help jet-lagged travellers. JOERG KOCH/GETTY IMAGES

Science. Researchers have developed an iPhone app to help weary travellers get over jet lag problems

Lots of apps claim they can help you fight jet lag. Now Michigan researchers say mathematical formulas suggest it's possible to adjust to new time zones a bit faster than previously thought, and they created their own free app to help.

Doctors have long said exposure to light is key. But how much, and when?

"If you get light in the wrong time or wrong way, it'll send you the wrong direction," said University of Michigan math professor Daniel Forger, who led the research published Thursday.

A master biological clock, called a circadian rhythm, regulates when we become sleepy and when we're more alert. Travel across time zones and the body clock has to reset itself.

Light is that clock's strongest regulator. It's possible to customize a block of time each day when you should be in light, the brighter the better, and another when you should avoid it, Forger's team reported in the journal PLoS Computational Biology.

A free iPhone app named Entrain does the calculations. Stay indoors, or stay up later, and it adjusts the advice.

The app hasn't been tested with travellers to see whether it really helps more than general advice, such as to seek morning light when travelling eastward. But after using it, travellers will be given a choice of submitting their data to a University of Michigan study.

Obama pays tribute to LBJ and legacy

Civil Rights Act. The law ended racial discrimination in public spaces in the U.S.

Barack Obama, America's first black president, declared Thursday that he had "lived out the promise" envisioned by Lyndon B. Johnson, the president who championed the push for greater racial equality with sweeping civil rights legislation a half century ago.

Marking the 50th anniversary of the Civil Rights Act, which Johnson signed into law, Obama lauded his Democratic predecessor's ability to grasp like few others the power of government to bring about change and swing open the doors of opportunity for millions of Americans.

Obama spoke at the end of a three-day summit commemorating the landmark law that ended racial discrimination in public places.

The anniversary has spurred a renaissance of sorts for Johnson's domestic agenda, which included the creation of Medicare for the elderly, Medicaid for the poor, and the Voting Rights Act.

Using Johnson's domestic successes as a model, Obama made the case that the government can still play a role in enacting social programs that can address inequalities.

What will Canada look like in 2017 as it becomes 150 years old? What will it look like beyond that?

The tide of immigration will continue, but some think the flow will become more of a trickle as the years pass.

"I think it's a fair assumption to think that there will be a lower level of immigration than the current level," said Western University sociology professor Roderic Beaujot.

Politicians may say Canada needs immigration "especially at election time," Beaujot said. But, the problem is, demographers and economists aren't necessarily preaching the same message, he said.

Beaujot also sees the need to stem population explosions around the world as having an adverse effect on immigration.

"The world can't sustain this continuous growth that we have," he said. "The population has to live within the ecology. For that alone, it may slow down."

Such thoughts are worlds away for two young women, who recently became Canadian citizens.

Paula Garcia's family came to Canada from Colombia seven years ago. Soon, the 23-year-old university student will be able to give back to the country that took her in, all while fulfilling a dream of her own.

She plans to be an elementary school teacher, in part, because she wants to offer children the best possible future.

"I love kids, so that's what I thought would be the best thing for me," she said. "I have the possibility to do this here now."

The citizenship ceremony, Garcia said, was wonderful, and while the test she had to pass to get there was difficult, it was fair. She earned an A.

She was one of 62 people who became citizens at a March 26 ceremony in London, Ont.

Maria Qureshi, 32, originally from Pakistan, was there too.

She held a small Canadian flag in her hand and had a smile on her face, after taking the oath. "It's like nervous excitement," she said. "I had tears in my eyes when they first announced that we're citizens, and I loved the judge's speech.

It was amazing."

Citizenship Judge Nor-mand Vachon quoted inspirational leaders such as Nelson Mandela, Mother Teresa and Mahatma Gandhi in his welcoming speech to the new Canadians.

Qureshi said the long wait for that day was difficult, but boasted that she too aced the citizenship test. "I studied extra hard for it, and I took it really seriously," she said proudly. "So I scored full marks on it."

In Canada, she said she hopes for a better future because she has a better chance of

Research

A Statistics Canada paper says one of three situations, all depending on a number of factors and formulas, will play out for immigration through 2036.

- Low projection: Six immigrants per thousand population each year; would be the lowest rate recorded since early 1990s.
- Medium projection: 7.5 immigrants per thousand population each year; matches the average annual immigration rate for early 1990s to late 2000s.
- High projection: Nine immigrants per thousand population each year; matches highest rate recorded since 1991.

Looking into the future

Here's what some of the people Metro talked to over the past five days said about where they've come from and what they hope to see in coming years.

Jamie Martinez (from Colombia): "The first thing that we need to do is to have equity here. It means if the population of Colombians is two per cent (in Canada), every company needs to have two per cent Colombians working there."

Shirley Edwards (from United Kingdom): "It takes a number of years to settle and integrate into a new country. Be patient, though. Know that when you need support (you can) ask for it (and) it will come. That's what community is for. That's the Canada we now call home."

It's simple to see why people from other countries care about immigration and are passionate about its future.

But what about the average Canadian? Is immigration — the influx of people with different ways of doing things — a positive or a negative thing?

Much of it depends on who you're asking, one expert said.

"Judging by the students I meet every year in Ottawa, who come from several parts of the country, the young generation has a more progressive and more open-minded notion (of immigration)," said University of Ottawa

Canadian history professor Pierre Anctil.

More rural areas tend to be less accepting, Anctil said. Though there are exceptions to that rule, he added.

Plan B: Why not engineer the climate?

Divisive proposal.

Supporters say it's inevitable, opponents say it's mad science; UN panel entertains the option

It's Plan B in the fight against climate change: cooling the planet by sucking heat-trapping CO2 from the air or reflecting sunlight back into space.

Called geoengineering, it's considered mad science by opponents. Supporters say it would be foolish to ignore it, since Plan A — slashing carbon emissions from fossil fuels — is moving so slowly.

The UN's expert panel on climate change is under pressure from both sides this week as it considers whether geoengineering should be part of the toolkit that governments use to keep global warming in check.

But even advocates of studying geoengineering express doubts.

"Really at the present moment there is a high level of uncertainty surrounding all of these options," said Steve Rayner, co-director of Oxford University's geoengineering program.

Some environmental activists watching the talks in Berlin want the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change to scratch references to geoengineering altogether. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

$50M per year. Ontario to provide IVF funding

Ontario's governing Liberals are promising to provide limited coverage of infertility services to more women who are struggling to get pregnant.

They say they plan to help would-be parents pay for one cycle of in vitro fertilization for all forms of infertility starting early next year.

But the province won't cover the costs of drugs and other services associated with IVF, which can cost thousands of dollars.

Health Minister Deb Matthews wouldn't say exactly how much of the IVF costs will be covered, but estimates Ontario will pay out $50 million annually once the program is fully implemented.

She says the government hasn't decided yet whether it will offset the costs through a tax credit or through the Ontario Health Insurance Plan.

Matthews says some infertile women turn to less effective and more dangerous alternatives to try to get pregnant, which can significantly increase the risk of multiple, pre-term births and severe medical and developmental problems. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Central African Republic. Priest says at least 30 dead in violent clashes Clashes between Christian and Muslim fighters in Central African Republic have left at least 30 people dead and forced others to flee their homes, a priest said Thursday.

Everaldo De Souza of the Saint Anne parish in the central town of Dekoa said the fighting began Tuesday when Christian militants attacked and Muslim fighters fought back.

A Christian commander confirmed the fighting but denied that his forces had started it. The death toll could not be independently confirmed.

The Muslim fighters, members of the disbanded Seleka rebel alliance who had a tenuous hold on the town when the fighting began, called for reinforcements, De Souza said.

Most of the dead were civilians, killed by Muslims who fired into a crowd of people they mistook for Christian militants, he said. Pillaging and death threats from the fighters forced many others to flee the town for the bush, he added.

Search crews intensify hunt for jet's crash site

Flight 370. Equipment picks up more sounds consistent with a plane's black box in deep waters of the Indian Ocean

An Australian aircraft Thursday detected what may be the fifth signal coming from a man-made device deep in the Indian Ocean, adding to hopes that searchers will soon pinpoint the object's location and send down a robotic vehicle to confirm if it is a black box from the missing Malaysian jet.

The Australian air force P-3 Orion, which has been dropping sonar buoys into the water near where four earlier sounds were heard, picked up a "possible signal" that may be from a man-made source, said Angus Houston, who is co-ordinating the search off Australia's west coast.

"The acoustic data will require further analysis overnight," Houston said.

If confirmed, the signal would narrow the hunt for Malaysia Airlines Flight 370, which vanished on March 8 while flying from Kuala Lumpur to Beijing with 239 people aboard.

The Australian ship Ocean Shield picked up two underwater sounds on Tuesday, and two sounds it detected Saturday were determined to be consistent with the pings emitted from a plane's flight recorders, or "black boxes."

The Australian air force has been dropping sonar buoys to maximize the sound-detectors operating in a search zone that is now the size of the city of Los Angeles.

Royal Australian Navy Commodore Peter Leavy said each buoy is dangling a hydrophone listening device about 300 metres below the surface. The buoys transmit data via radio back to the plane.

The underwater search zone is now a 1,300-square-kilometre patch of the ocean floor, and narrowing the area as much as possible is crucial before an unmanned submarine can be sent to create a sonar map of a potential debris field on the seabed. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Time running out to find black boxes

- Investigators suspect the plane went down in the southern Indian Ocean based on a flight path calculated from its contacts with a satellite and analysis of its speed and fuel capacity, but the content of the flight data and cockpit voice recorders is essential to solving the mystery of why the plane was lost.
- The search for the black boxes is increasingly urgent because their locator beacons have batteries that last about a month and may fail soon.
- An Australian government briefing document said the acoustic pingers likely would continue to transmit at decreasing strength for up to 10 more days.

CBC cutting 657 jobs after hit of losing HNIC

The Canadian Broadcasting Corp. said it will cut 657 jobs over the next two years as it deals with a big budget shortfall. PETER POWER/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Budget. The public broadcaster has been dealt serious blows by loss of Hockey Night in Canada and 'hostile' government cuts

The CBC is slashing 657 positions over two years and will no longer pursue broadcast rights to professional sports as it grapples with a massive budget shortfall.

The public broadcaster announced a swath of cuts Thursday that will shave $130 million from its 2014-2015 budget and spur a new mandate "to reimagine itself" as the media landscape changes.

CBC president Hubert Lacroix detailed the news at a town hall meeting for employees that outlined financial challenges including a softened advertising market, disappointing ratings for CBC-TV, "much lower-than-expected" ad revenues from Espace musique and CBC Radio 2, and the loss of NHL broadcast rights to Rogers Media.

"There's no easy way to deliver news like this," Lacroix said in prepared remarks that were posted online moments after his private address.

"I know many of you are sad. I know there will be many questions. We will answer them straight up, both in our Q&A session today, in the meetings that will follow, and as things take shape over the coming days."

Spokesman Ian Morrison, of the watchdog group Friends of Canadian Broadcasting, blamed the budget troubles on "a hostile" Conservative government that reduced the CBC's funding appropriation by $115 million back in 2012.

Declared public nuisance. Sriracha factory pecked by Irwindale in heated spat

A Southern California city has declared the factory that produces the popular Sriracha hot sauce a public nuisance.

The Irwindale City Council's action Wednesday night gives the factory 90 days to make changes to stop the spicy odours that prompted complaints from some residents last fall. Declaring a public nuisance will allow city officials to enter the factory and make changes if the odours persist after the deadline.

The decision came despite testimony by air-quality experts that progress was being made toward a resolution. The South Coast Air Quality Management District said its inspectors have taken air samples inside the plant, and believed the information gathered should allow the factory and the city to resolve their differences.

Attorney John Tate, who represents Sriracha maker Huy Fong Foods, Inc., said the company had been working with the AQMD on its filtration system since the complaints first arose and was committed to finding long-term solutions by June 1.

He called the public nuisance declaration a demonstration of "the city flexing its muscle and thumbing Huy Fong in the eye."

A call to Irwindale City Attorney Fred Galante was not immediately returned.

Who thinks honesty is the best policy?

MILEY DROPS BALL ON FEMALE POWER

1 Solidarity. You know that one relative we all enable? The “victim” that alienates everyone, wants no part of the family, but still feels entitled to financial support as if restitution for their “emotional scars”? We pity them but eventually just stop taking their calls. It’s sad. In unrelated news, the Parti Québécois was convincingly defeated in Quebec’s provincial election.

2 Wrecking Ball. Some think that Miley Cyrus is just a wild child, but she’s really a freedom-fighter advocating sexual equality. Cyrus says “Guy rappers grab their crotch all f---ing day and have hos around them... but if I grab my crotch and have hot model b---hes around me, I’m degrading women? ... But I’m part of the evolution of that. I hope.” So there it is: Miley Cyrus is the evolution of female empowerment. As well, probably a growing trend of parents home-schooling their daughters.

3 #MarchMadness. The NCAA men’s basketball finals saw the University of Connecticut Huskies defeat the Kentucky Wildcats. It marked the first time a 7th and 8th seed met in the finals but was no less satisfying. We saw high energy, great dunks, some violent unsportsmanlike conduct, and terrific in-depth analysis. And that was just from the other guys at the bar.

4 #DayofPink. This year’s “international day against bullying, discrimination, homophobia and transphobia in schools and communities” took place this week with tremendous support. The best hope to deter a bully is to educate them and others about how to deal with them. We can draw from our own experiences as almost all of us can relate to being bullied: Some by the big kid at school, others by their boss, and some by Revenue Canada. (That last one was a cry for help. They’re killing me!)

5 U Conn’t beat ‘em. The day after their boys won it all, U Conn’s undefeated women’s team scored a convincing victory over Notre Dame’s also undefeated ‘fighting Irish’ to bring home the championship. Both teams set new standards for their schools, and for women everywhere. But I can’t help think that somewhere at the heart of all this, stands Miley Cyrus. (What? Too much?) #Uconn

6 Holy week. Two upcoming religious holidays include Passover for the Jews, and Easter for Christians. Both share a historical bond celebrated with wine and feasts and family members gathering to remind each other of things long forgotten. Like the time they went to a party and woke up at the zoo, lost the family savings in a Ponzi scheme, or declared grandpa mentally incompetent to gain control of his estate. All the while, sharing blessings of peace. Happy holidays!

7 In memoriam. The passing of Hollywood icon Mickey Rooney revived reports of elder abuse that left him almost destitute. @peoplemag tweeted: “Mickey Rooney’s funeral delayed by family fighting” which prompted George Lopez to tweet “I didn’t know Mickey Rooney was Mexican?” That aside, his physical stature never diminished his artistic largesse, and that body of work, not his financial estate, is his true legacy. #RIP

Indoor cloud art is mist-ifying

A Dutch artist is taking the creative industry by storm... with his indoor clouds. Berndnaut Smilde, 35, from Amsterdam, Netherlands, uses a smoke machine and clever lighting to create nimbuses of various shapes in empty spaces. Artist’s viewpoint

“It always takes awhile to get a cloud where I want it. Their ephemerality is what I like the most. They just appear for a few seconds and then it falls apart.”

Mystery points to the ominous

Ultimately, “there is a definite ominous element of my work,” the artist says, pointing to the clouds’ mystifying quality. “There is something ungraspable about clouds, which I think is really interesting,” Smilde says.

“For this reason, people have been creating myths and meanings around clouds for centuries,” he concluded.

Babies let their taste buds do the talking

ANDREW FIFIELD

If we were to rank food flavours that are largely hostile to our taste buds, lemons would have to rank near the top with sour keys and horseradish. But that’s an admittedly sophisticated opinion, hardened by years spent emptying bowls, cups and plates. Combining flavours and whatnot.

To get to the kernel of a lemon’s appeal, we need to return to ground zero for citrusy flavour country and put them in the hands of babies. The results are obviously adorable, but there’s something suspicious about the ones that appear to like it. Or perhaps they’re just old souls.

This Draft Day is full of drama

Reel Guys

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

Denis Leary, Frank Langella and Kevin Costner star in Draft Day, which opens today.
CONTRIBUTED

Synopsis

On the day of the NFL Draft, Cleveland Browns general manager Sonny Weaver Jr. (Kevin Costner) is faced with some tough choices. His team is not doing well, sports radio talking heads are beating him up for ruining the franchise his late father — the legendary coach Sonny Weaver Sr. — built up and his girlfriend (Jennifer Garner) is angry with him. His future and possibly the future of the team hinges on one deal: a massive trade for hotshot quarterback Bo Callahan (Josh Pence).

- Richard: ●●●●●
- Mark: ●●●●●

Finding feeling in football. Kevin Costner brings a lot of heart to this film about a down-on-his-luck NFL general manager hinging his future on one big trade

Richard: Mark, the message behind Draft Day is that technical ability is one thing, but having heart is more important. It's a key message for the story but vital when considering the movie as a whole. This film is technically proficient, but loads of technically proficient flicks aren't as entertaining as this one. This movie works particularly well because it has heart, just like the players that Kevin Costner's character tries to recruit for his football team.

Mark: Which makes the movie the opposite of Moneyball, which celebrates rationality and scientific method. I much preferred Costner's flawed, slightly desperate soul over Brad Pitt's technocrat. But there were other reasons I liked the movie. Having it take place on one day gives the film an urgency that really pulls you in. And there were some nice directorial flourishes, too.

I haven't seen split screen used so well in a long time. And let's not forget a strong supporting cast.

RC: Like Moneyball, Draft Day scores authenticity points by casting a number of sports figures and insiders playing themselves, but you're right, the supporting cast of professional actors really scores a touchdown. I enjoyed seeing Frank Langella playing the anything-for-a-buck owner of the Browns and Ellen Burstyn and Dennis Leary as Sonny's mother and grumpy coach respectively, are both great. Sean Combs didn't even bother me. Of course, this really is Kevin Costner's movie. He's easy to watch at the best of times but particularly so when he's in the genre that works best for him, and that's sports movies.

MB: And it's hard to watch Costner in this without thinking about his iconic sports roles in Field of Dreams or Bull Durham. In fact, this is often where players wind up — as coaches and managers. So there's a through line to the character to appreciate. The only thing that bothered me was that I am not a football fan. I've never seen a game. So all the negotiations were like watching a game of chess without any idea how the pieces are moved. Could you follow the technical details of the trades? Or were you wishing for subtitles?

RC: Subtitles might have helped a bit, but for me it didn't matter if I followed the intricacies of the draft day business because I think the underlying emotion that comes along with changing someone's life by drafting them into the NFL — I found those scenes powerful.

MB: Director Ivan Reitman has had a tendency to lapse into sentiment and bathos, but he keeps these tendencies nicely in check. I loved Costner, but I was also impressed at the sure handed direction. Reitman's working at the top of his game.

Did Llewyn's cat ever come back?

Searching for Ulysses.

Now that the Coen Brothers' latest offering is on DVD, it's time to talk about the fate of that mangy orange tabby

With Inside Llewyn Davis newly available for home viewing, it's time to answer the question that has vexed pet lovers and conspiracy nerds for months.

What did the Coen Bros. do to that poor, bedraggled cat?

If you haven't yet seen the movie, my top film of 2013, and you consider feline misfortune to be a spoiler, please stop reading now and watch Inside Llewyn Davis on DVD or Blu-ray. Enjoy the movie, and come back later.

For the rest of us, it's time to take a cold, hard look at the big furry mystery of the marmalade tabby named Ulysses that dogs New York folk singer Llewyn Davis (Oscar Isaac) in the film.

Cat lovers everywhere have debated the fate of Llewyn's cat Ulysses. The Coen Brothers offer us a roundabout answer.

The two become inseparable companions after the couch-surfing Llewyn accidentally locks Ulysses out of the apartment of his genial hosts the Gorfeins, who are both at work. The more Llewyn tries to unload his cat problem onto somebody else, the more Ulysses draws near.

Then the cat decides, as cats are wont to do, that it's time to be on its own. There's more than this happening, of course. But let's just say that events transpire to have Llewyn driving a car on the lonely highway between Chicago and New York, a light snow falling. He's fighting fatigue from lack of sleep, barely watching the road.

Suddenly, something small and furry crosses in front of the windshield.

BAM! A shocked Llewyn realizes he's hit something.

He pulls the car over to side of the road and examines the front bumper. There's blood all over it.

Then he looks behind the car and sees a small animal, obviously injured, dragging itself toward a stand of trees. It's seeking shelter and safety.

There is no logical reason to assume that this is Ulysses. In fact, logic would suggest otherwise. It might even be a figment of Llewyn's imagination.

But such is the power of film that we instinctively assume the injured animal is Llewyn's cat. We feel terrible for it, more than we might for some random roadkill.

I suspect that a lot of cat lovers hated the scene.

I also suspect that writers/directors Joel and Ethan Coen realized this might happen, and tried to avoid being tagged as cat haters. I asked them in an interview about the roadside incident when Inside Llewyn Davis premiered theatrically last December. They denied having any murderous intentions toward tabbies, although they did say that cats are way less eager to be movie stars than dogs are.

"It's funny, but we weren't even thinking that while shooting (the road scene)," Ethan said. "We were thinking Llewyn hit some kind of animal. But the cat is so established in the movie, everybody who watches it is determined to turn that creature into the cat."

"Which is understandable," Joel interjected. "It's a random animal. Maybe it's a cat, maybe it's a raccoon. It's hard to see. We wanted it to be very obscure."

"We wanted to not know," Ethan said, jumping back in.

"Not that it matters, but the creature that we actually shot with was a small dog."

Whatever it is, the important thing to know is that it's not Ulysses.

So now you know, or at least as much as those wily Coen Bros. want you to know.

Transcendence. Actor ditches all the makeup to play a computer genius in sci-fi tale

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

Fans of Johnny Depp may be startled to discover that in his latest film, the techno-thriller Transcendence, the chameleon-like actor looks like ... Johnny Depp.

"I knew right off the bat there was no need to go into pink-haired, clown nose, Ronald McDonald shoes," says Depp, who has made a habit of taking on roles that involve more than a little white face paint, from Tonto in the Lone Ranger to the Mad Hatter in Alice in Wonderland.

But the most makeup Depp hides behind in Transcendence is only there to show the physical deterioration of his character, computer genius Will Caster, after he gets radiation poisoning.

"It's always more difficult and slightly exposing to play something that's close to the surface, something that's close to yourself," Depp says.

"I always try to hide because I can't stand the way I look, first. I think it's important to change every time, and come up with something that's as interesting as you can for your characters."

Eventually Dr. Caster's consciousness is uploaded to a massive computer, keeping him "alive" but turning him into a ghost in the machine — and a face on a video screen.

"I did feel a little bit like Max Headroom," Depp admits.

"I guess the worst part is I liked it. I liked being in my little dark room, and [my co-stars] were on the other side. We couldn't find each other sometimes." And apparently playing a foreboding version of advanced artificial intelligence didn't put Depp off the idea of that theoretical technological advancement.

"Having no intelligence, I'm looking forward to gaining something, whether artificial, superficial or superficial," he quips.

All joking aside, Depp admits he's something of a Luddite when it comes to new technology — especially the handheld kind.

"Things go wrong all the time, especially between me and technology. I'm not familiar with it and I'm too old-school a brain and dumb to be able to figure it out," he says.

"Anything I have to attack with my thumbs for any period of time makes me feel stupid. So I try to avoid it as much as possible — to protect my thumbs, of course."

Plus, there's also the fact that by the time he's gotten used to a piece of technology, the world may have moved on.

"Think about how technology is moving so rapidly. Things become obsolete very, very quickly," he says.

"So let's say Will Caster, in 15 years' time, is going to be in some weird room in Vegas, and people are plugging quarters into him. Right? Who has a mini-disc or laser disc player? It's over."

Colbert to take over Letterman spot

Late Show. CBS chooses popular political satirist to helm talk show

CBS moved swiftly Thursday to replace the retiring David Letterman with Comedy Central's Stephen Colbert, who will take over the Late Show next year and do battle with Jimmy Fallon and Jimmy Kimmel for late-night television supremacy.

Colbert, 49, has been hosting The Colbert Report since 2005, in character as a fictional conservative talk-show host. The character will retire with The Colbert Report.

"Simply being a guest on David Letterman's show has been a highlight of my career," Colbert said. "I never dreamed that I would follow in his footsteps, though everyone in late night follows Dave's lead."

Letterman, who turns 67 on Saturday, announced on his show last week that he would retire some time in 2015, although he hasn't set a date. CBS said Thursday that creative elements of Colbert's new show, including where it will be based, will be announced later.

Mayors of New York and Los Angeles have already publicly urged the new Late Show host to choose their city. New York would appear to have the clear edge, since Colbert is already based in New York and CBS owns the Ed Sullivan Theater, where the Late Show has been taped since Letterman took over in 1993.

Letterman offered his endorsement Thursday. "Stephen has always been a real

Late-night churn

It's a rapidly changing period for that time slot. Fallon took over for Jay Leno on NBC's Tonight show in February, and has dominated the ratings since his arrival, with Letterman and Kimmel running neck-and-neck for second. Chelsea Handler has also said she is about to end her talk show on E! Entertainment Television.

It's a rapidly changing period for that time slot. Fallon took over for Jay Leno on NBC's Tonight show in February, and has dominated the ratings since his arrival, with Letterman and Kimmel running neck-and-neck for second. Chelsea Handler has also said she is about to end her talk show on E! Entertainment Television.

CBS chose not to break the mould: CBS, ABC and NBC will all compete at 11:35 p.m. with shows hosted by white males. CBS, which has an older audience and generally seeks personalities with the widest appeal possible, is taking a chance with a personality whose show has a much more specific appeal. But, like Fallon and Kimmel, Colbert is popular with young men and active on the Internet and social media.

"Our discussions really centred on finding the most talented, the most creative (choice), the person who was going to conduct the most interesting interviews and be the most interesting person himself, and that's what led us to Stephen," said Nina Tassler, CBS entertainment chairman. She said CBS considered several candidates, but did not name them.

Colbert's show won the Emmy for best variety series last year and has earned two Peabody Awards. It's another big move for a Jon Stewart protégé: Colbert worked on The Daily Show for eight years before getting his own program, and John Oliver is about to launch a weekly show for HBO later this month.

hasn't even shown people yet. He would be remarkable."

The choice of Colbert quickly drew the ire of a real-life conservative talk-show host. Radio's Rush Limbaugh said Thursday that CBS "has just declared war on the heartland of America. No longer is comedy going to be a covert assault on traditional American values, conservatives. Now it's just wide open."

Limbaugh mispronounced Colbert's name as col-bert, instead of the proper pronunciation, col-bear.

The decision opens up a hole on Comedy Central's schedule. The network said in a statement Thursday that "we look forward to the next eight months of the groundbreaking Colbert Report and wish Stephen the very best."

Stewart told New York magazine on Wednesday night that Colbert would be terrific for Letterman's job. Stewart said he likes what he does and Colbert has a better opportunity to broaden out his comedy than he would.

"He is a uniquely talented individual," Stewart said. "He's wonderful in Colbert Report, but he's got gears he Tassler declined comment on what Colbert's ascension will mean for Craig Ferguson, who follows Letterman's show in the 12:35 a.m. time slot and was considered a candidate for Letterman's job.

Colbert would likely enter into some friendly competition with Fallon. Colbert appeared on Fallon's first Tonight show, one of a line of personalities in a gag involving people who had to "pay up" on a bet about whether Fallon would ever get the To-

Brad Adgate, an analyst for Horizon Media, described Colbert as "the best talk-show host available." He said CBS wanted to move quickly to make its choice for Letterman's replacement before next month's meeting with advertisers in New York about the upcoming season's schedule.

"When you've got fire in the belly, you move fast," Tassler said.

All good things come to an end

With the first half of the seventh and final season of Mad Men making its debut Sunday, creator Matthew Weiner — and two of the show's most celebrated actors — take a moment to reflect on the series and even wonder, 'What's next?'

Jon Hamm gets ready to say goodbye

AMC

It's a long way down the road. I'm sure it will be incredibly difficult, but all good things come to an end. This is no exception."

With the last season of his run as Don Draper coming to an end, Jon Hamm took a moment to reflect on the character that put him on the map.

So what would he and Don talk about if he got a chance to sit down with the mysterious ad exec? "I think we'd talk about life," Hamm says. "I think we'd talk about families, we'd talk about experiences and I'd ask him to please shape up."

And when everything Mad Men is all said and done, what will Hamm do next? "No, I don't know, honestly. I really don't."

Matt Weiner just might take a vacation

Mad Men series creator Matt Weiner doesn't yet have a sense of what he'll want to make next.

"I think I'll know what's on my mind when it's over for a little bit," he says of Mad Men's final season. "I haven't taken a vacation in a long time. I made a film in between two of the seasons, which is coming out this summer after this block of episodes."

In terms of future work, Weiner doesn't know if he'll return to TV. "This is one of the best lives there is and I don't expect this to happen again, but I would love it."

So has the show changed his life? Weiner says creatively it's been challenging beyond his wildest dreams. He's directed, learned how to produce and learned how to deal with business.

"I've learned so much about America, learned so much about myself. Everything changed," he says.

Elisabeth Moss looks ahead

For six seasons, Mad Men has chronicled the career of Don Draper, but it's also followed the career of his assistant-turned-full-fledged-mad-woman Peggy Olson, played by Elisabeth Moss.

Some viewers have even gone so far as to speculate that the whole arc of the series — which began on Peggy's first day on the job, after all — is actually more about Peggy than Don. Moss, for her part, is flattered by the idea, but she's not having it. "I think it's about Don Draper, he's the lead character of the show," she insists. "That would be a very long red herring story."

So, red herrings aside, what does Moss hope the conclusion of the series holds for Peggy? "I want her to be working and I want her to be successful at her work, but I think that's because I identify with her, so I kind of want what she wants. I hope that she gets that," she says.

Fargo winter for old time's flakes

Cold comfort. Calgary location keeps Fargo series in a deep freeze

None of the characters in the Coen brothers' 1996 classic Fargo will make an appearance in the new TV series of the same name — with one exception.

"One of the central characters of this thing is the harsh winter," said Keith Carradine, who plays cop-turned-coffee shop owner Lou Solverson.

"You don't think of Fargo being a summertime place. It's synonymous with brutal cold."

The show was filmed in and around Calgary throughout the winter, when temperatures frequently dropped below -30 C. And yet the shooting went ahead, save for one dangerously cold day.

Carradine said the cold was a challenge and an inspiration. "As an actor, you walk out the door and you feel that blast. It infuses what you do," he said.

Allison Tolman plays Molly,

Lou's daughter and the smartest member of her town's police force. Having lived in Chicago, Tolman said she's no stranger to winter. But Calgary was something else.

"I've never been as cold as I was back in December, when we were shooting out by a frozen lake," she said. "You kind of leave your body."

Executive producer Warren Littlefield said Fargo required a "frozen tundra" to stand in for Bemidji, Minn., where much of the story is set.

He recalls scouting out locations last July in a rickety RV called "the Diplomat." While driving east of Calgary, a sudden hail storm turned the brilliant green-yellow canola fields grey-white.

Littlefield, a former NBC executive, was convinced they'd found the right spot.

"I said, 'Well, this is July. If you can accomplish this in July, imagine what it will be like in January.'"

Littlefield recalled a "spectacular day" shooting on a frozen lake northwest of Calgary, when it was -30 C with the wind chill.

"I think it was the most exciting day that I ever had in my life on a set shooting. The visuals of that world were sensational and we got everything accomplished and as we returned back to Calgary that night, we were just feeling triumphant," he said.

"And yes, we killed a few people up there that day, but that was all in the script."

But there was another day in December when it simply wasn't safe for the cast and crew to be outside.

Littlefield's first clue came when a stiff wind swept across the prairie, obliterating an orange traffic cone. "I'll never forget this visual," he said. "It literally shattered. It was so cold that the orange traffic cone just turned into confetti strips."

When the warming bus wouldn't start and the pipes in the portable washroom froze, Littlefield knew the shoot would have to be called off.

Let it blow

There's no sticky biz like fake snow biz

While much of the desired look of Fargo was taken care of by Mother Nature, it needed to be bolstered in some scenes by fake snow.

On a shoot just outside downtown Calgary on a balmy March day, flakes with the consistency of shredded rice cakes were seen blowing around the set.

While the phoney snow looks good, actors said it's a bother to work in.

"A pain in the ass," deadpanned Martin Freeman, who plays Lester Nygaard, an unhappily married insurance salesman.

"It stays on your feet. It gets stuck in your shoes. But it's a necessary pain in the ass. But it is marginally more comfortable than real snow," he said.

Allison Tolman said she's not a fan either.

"It's pretty disgusting stuff, but it looks good."

Do you know what you know her from?

Actress Judy Greer. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bringing up the Greer. Rom-com actress typecasts fans to help them place her face

Actress Judy Greer laments what she sees as a decline in the film genre she's built a career on: The romantic comedy. "Studios aren't really making those movies right now," the Detroit native, who's known for playing the best friend or idiosyncratic confidante in many rom-coms, said as she promoted her new book, I Don't Know What You Know Me From: Confessions of a Co-Star.

"I'd really like for it to come back because I love a romantic comedy. I want at the end the guy to get the girl, like real bad, you know?"

Greer points to My Best Friend's Wedding as an example of the kind of rom-com she loves and wants to see more of.

"How was I not in that movie?" she said with a laugh. "That's the one I wasn't in! But I do think studios are making giant, giant, giant blockbuster superhero movies and then there are smaller, independent movies that are getting made.

"But we need to bring back middle-budget, good old fashioned romantic comedy."

As Greer explains in her humorous and candid collection of essays, when fans approach her they often recognize her face but can't place where they know her from.

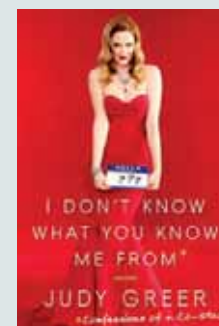

"Then you have to kind of figure it out together or ... you look sort of stand-offish when you're like, 'I don't know, I've been in a lot of stuff, sorry,'" said the 38-year-old, whose current projects include the animated series Archer and her web series, Reluctantly Healthy.

That's when she started resorting to "fan profiling," which is guessing which project the fan knows her from based on factors including gender.

With women, for instance, she often lists romantic comedies she's been in, "because chicks like romantic comedies, we just do."

You might know her from:

- The down-to-earth stage and screen performer has co-starred in rom-coms including The Wedding Planner, 13 Going on 30, 27 Dresses and Love & Other Drugs.
- Her long list of credits also includes a diverse range of projects, from The Village and Dawn of the Planet of the Apes, to Jeff, Who Lives at Home and Arrested Development.

"I learned dudes probably like watching maybe Two and a Half Men or Californication, or Arrested Development was always a safe one for, like, young hipsters in Los Angeles."

Still, Greer is happy with her career, noting she's had a steady stream of work and doesn't have to hire security every time she goes out.

Greer started doing press for I Don't Know What You Know Me From this week in Toronto, where the book got its start.

The voracious reader and lifelong journal writer said she was sitting on a bench in the city's Trinity Bellwoods Park while shooting the Carrie film remake a year and a half ago when she got a call from agents about the idea.

"Being a movie star is really hard to achieve," said Greer. "There's only so many Julia Roberts and Sandra Bullocks out there. I think of myself as like my audience and I'm just like my fans, and I don't know that my fans are movie stars."

"But my fans can be friends with movie stars just like I can be friends with movie stars."

This ex-Calgary band, now based in Toronto, acknowledges the 20th anniversary of the passing of Kurt Cobain with this cover of Nirvana's Breed. It's available as a free download. Their new album, Filthy Souls, is available now.

Lionheart/PUP

You'd think another LEGO Hobbit game would be tiresome, yet this new entry — based on the two recent films — admirably finds enough fresh ideas to make you feel the joy all over again. There's dwarf mining tasks, a dish juggling mini-game, LEGO riddles, and an astonishingly epic run through the Goblin Caves. The considerable creativity that must have gone in to make everything new, to make each dwarf unique, to give even the background characters their own animated charm, stands out and will leave you shaking your head in wonderment.

The CTV comedy stars Dave Foley, part of renowned Canadian sketch comedy troupe the Kids in the Hall.

No singalongs? Summer camp based on Divergent launched

Campers at the Divergent summer camp will learn martial arts.
SUMMIT ENTERTAINMENT

Your summer camp days were probably spend making tie-dye T-shirts and canoeing, right? Well, there will be none of that at the upcoming Divergent summer camp in Illinois.

Yes, that's right. The geniuses at a local bookstore in Naperville, Ill. watched all the blood, sweat and tears that went into Dauntless training and thought, wouldn't it be cool to make teens do this stuff in real life?

The tweens and teens who attend will partake in types of activities that each of the factions in the book do. For example, they'll try their hand at complicated brain teasers to exercise their Erudite side and make care packages to send to Africa to show their selfless Abnegation side. As for the Dauntless activities, don't worry, campers won't be jumping off trains or scaling any Ferris wheels. But they will be learning martial arts.

Since the camp is being run by a bookstore, there will be some required reading, especially of the dystopian variety.

CNN shaking up prime time with several new shows

CNN is replacing Piers Morgan's prime-time talk show with not one program but several, featuring personalities like Mike Rowe, John Walsh, Lisa Ling, Anthony Bourdain and Morgan Spurlock.

The network revealed its schedule change Thursday in a meeting with advertisers. The new lineup ends a three-decade tradition of a CNN talk show at 9 p.m. Eastern, first with Larry King and then with Morgan, who ended his show in the past few weeks.

The time slot will be filled with a series of documentary-style programs, including Bourdain's popular Parts Unknown travelogue and Spurlock's Inside Man. Rowe, former host of Dirty Jobs, will profile people with unusual professions. Walsh will follow criminal investigations and Ling will immerse herself in American subcultures.

The new issue of Rolling Stone, out April 24. MARK SELIGER/ROLLING STONE

Rolling Stone flubs U.S. Constitution 'tattoo' on Louis-Dreyfus's back

Julia Louis-Dreyfus better hope her latest tattoo is a temporary one.

The cover image of next month's Rolling Stone magazine featuring the Veep star depicts a nude Louis-Dreyfus with a tattoo of the U.S. Constitution signed by John Hancock across her back. The problem is Hancock signed the Declaration of Independence, not the Constitution.

Louis-Dreyfus jokingly blamed the blunder on Mike McClintock, the fictional Veep character played by Matt Walsh who serves as communications director to Louis-Dreyfus' Vice-President Selina Meyer on the HBO comedy series.

"Yet another Mike (expletive)-up," the 53-year-old actress posted Wednesday on Twitter. "Dummy."

The National Constitution Center in Philadelphia mocked the flub by tweeting a photo of the cover alongside such founding fathers as George Washington and Benjamin Franklin in Signers' Hall with the words, "Thanks for the shoutout but no Hancock here."

Rolling Stone spokeswoman Melissa Bruno said the Declaration of Independence is on the other side of Louis-Dreyfus' body, but they couldn't fit in the signatures.

Naya Rivera, Big Sean put the 'ex' in Rolex

MELINDA TAUB
Metro World News

Naya Rivera and Big Sean have called off their engagement. But their breakup is no placid, cordial conscious uncoupling. It's more of a tweet-accusations-of-theft kind of uncoupling.

Rapper Big Sean's rep said that it was his decision to call off the engagement, denying rumours that he'd cheated. Sources told TMZ that he called things off because Rivera, who stars on Glee as Santana, was too controlling and jealous.

Rivera herself felt no need to get her side of the story out through anonymous sources: She went straight to the Internet. In a now-deleted tweet, she wrote, "@bigsean stealing rolexes from a lady's house now. Maybe cuz I'm on Glee and making more money or something. #triflin."

Burn! But the story doesn't end there. Sources told TMZ that the watch was actually Sean's and he just lent it to Rivera. We look forward to more deleted tweets in response.

Regardless, neither is likely to languish in singlehood for long: Rivera seems to have gone up a cup size or two of late. And hey, Big Sean has a Rolex now.

What's eating Johnny Depp? Friends worry he's hiding partying from fiancée Johnny Depp's engagement to Amber Heard seems to have calmed his wild ways, but sources close to the Pirates of the Caribbean star are worried he hasn't actually cleaned up his act and is hiding his more reckless behaviour from her, according to Radar Online. "Johnny was so wild for so long, and it's hard to believe that Amber has straightened him out completely. Last year he was partying with six chicks and getting turned away from bars. This year, he's quietly going to dinner with Amber and you never see him do anything wrong," a source says.

"Johnny always seemed like he was having a great time out partying, and it wasn't just because a lot of women were around. People are afraid that he's just stopped partying or is hiding his partying to be a good and upstanding guy for Amber. No one wants to see him go down that path again, so they're hoping Amber is keeping him in line."

If Lena Dunham has one regret in life, it's that she isn't a lesbian. While being honoured at the Point Foundation awards earlier this week, Dunham praised her lesbian sister and admitted to a tinge of sexual orientation-centred jealousy, according to E! Online. "I have always felt a strong and emotional connection to the members of the LGBTQ community," Dunham says. "It was actually a huge disappointment for me when I came of age and realized that I was sexually attracted to men. So when my sister came out I thought, 'Thank God, someone in this family can truly represent my passions and beliefs.'"

The California Wine Fair has begun its annual trek across the country. It's always a classy night out, and fans of The Golden State will get to wet their whistle with a wide variety of wines from many of Cali's prime wine regions.

Though the Napa and Sonoma Valleys made it famous, California has almost 150 American Viticultural Areas (AVAs). These AVAs define each wine's geographical origin and where grapes that made the juice were grown.

Paso Robles may not be the easiest region to pronounce (it's pah-sow-row-bless), but it's producing some of the most original wines on the U.S. west coast from dozens of different grape varieties. Located between Los Angeles and San Francisco, it's also the home to many of Cali's most straight forward and consistent whites and reds made from mainstream fruit.

Shanahan joining Leafs, sources say

NHL. Hall of Famer to step down as league's director of player safety and could become the Buds' president

The intriguing concept of Brendan Shanahan joining the Toronto Maple Leafs has been rattling around the restless mind of Maple Leaf Sports and Entertainment president and CEO Tim Leiweke for months.

But after an explosion of speculation from a variety of media outlets in the past 48 hours forced the idea to be fast-tracked, that concept is about to turn into reality.

Shanahan, according to multiple sources, will resign his position as the NHL's director of player safety as early as Friday and immediately join the Leafs this weekend as the team closes out a disappointing season.

While his precise job could not be confirmed, sources suggest the Hall of Fame winger

Brendan Shanahan
GETTY IMAGES FILE

will likely be named president of the Leafs hockey club, not only president of hockey operations.

A formal press conference to announce his hiring could happen as early as Monday in Leiweke's latest eye-popping manoeuvre.

Shanahan has been toying with the idea of joining the Leafs for weeks. His preference, it's believed, would have been to stay in his current job until the end of the Stanley Cup final in June.

However, it is unlikely commissioner Gary Bettman, even with the Leafs not involved in the 2014 Stanley Cup playoffs, was comfortable with Shanahan remaining on the job if the hockey world knew he was soon going to take an executive position with a member club. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Bill Haas putts on the first green during the first round of the Masters on Thursday in Augusta, Ga. Haas is trying to do what his father, Jay, couldn't do — win a major. Making Haaste to the top of the leaderboard

The Masters. Bill Haas attempting to win green jacket for his golfing family

With dad in his ear, Bill Haas turned in the best round of his Masters career Thursday.

Now he wants to do what his father never could — finish the job.

Haas birdied the final hole for a 4-under 68 and the opening-round lead, the first time he has broken 70 in five appearances at Augusta National.

His father, Jay, played in the Masters 22 times, with five top-10 finishes topped by a tie for third in 1995. He is staying with his son this week and providing valuable advice on the practice range.

"I never remember thinking, 'Man, I wish I could hit this shot for my dad,'" Bill Haas said. "But I do know that there's times I'm like, 'I wish my dad could hit this shot for me.'"

Jay Haas never won a major despite having plenty of success on the PGA Tour.

Maybe his 31-year-old son can take care of that family oversight.

"I think he deserves a major in his career as good as he played," Bill Haas said.

Defending champion Adam Scott has his major title and got off to a strong start in his quest to stay dressed in green.

Scott rolled in a testy putt to save par at the 18th, and finished with a 69, one shot off the lead.

Canadians in Augusta

It was a tough first round for Graham DeLaet of Weyburn, Sask. DeLaet bogeyed six of his first seven holes and opened at 8-over 80.

- Mike Weir of Bright's Grove, Ont., who won the green jacket in 2003, shot a first round of 1 over.

"It was a nice way to walk off, not shooting 70," Scott said.

Louis Oosthuizen and Bubba Watson, another owner of a green jacket, matched Scott with a 69.

Playing in their first Masters, Jimmy Walker, Kevin Stadler and Jonas Blixt were among those shooting 70, making their way around the course just fine despite some unfamiliarity with the revered layout. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
